

18th Professorial Inaugural Lecture: Why Water Resource Dev. Creates Health Hazard – Prof. Oyeyi

By Bala G. Abdullahi

An erudite scholar and a Professor of Parasitology in the Department of Biological Sciences, Bayero University, Kano, (Dame) Tinuade Esther Ibijoke Oyeyi has linked, with empirical evidences, the prevalence of Schistosomiasis diseases to Water Resource Development initiatives.

She, however, cautioned that it would amount to unfairness and misleading to generalize that water resources and agricultural development projects were solely to blame for creating health hazards, such as schistosomiasis.

The erudite scholar, who delivered the 18th Professorial inaugural lecture on Thursday, 30th March, 2017 at Musa Abdullahi Auditorium, New Campus titled: Linking Schistosomiasis and Water Resources Development in Kano State Nigeria: Public Health Impact and Mitigation, buttressed her point by citing studies conducted in northern Cameroon, Burkina Faso, northern Nigeria and northern Ghana which she said did not find any transmission of schistosomiasis from impounding small bodies of water, adding that 'the association of schistosomiasis with water project is known to vary within different ecological zones in a single country as well as between countries and global regions.'

Professor Oyeyi explained that the general goal of the lecture was to give an update on the existing level of schistosomiasis and examine its relationship with water resources development in Kano State, Nigeria as well as the public health impact and mitigation measures, through a review of past and present studies.

Giving an insight into the life cycle and mode of infection of the disease, the scholar revealed that Schistosomiasis or Bilharzias was a disease caused by a parasitic worm species of the genus Schisto-soma, explaining that the adult worm live in the blood of mammals, but part of its life cycle required the use of a freshwater snail for completion; hence the link with freshwater bodies.

She lamented that chronic, insidious and debilitating, schistosomiasis was responsible for high degree of morbidity and low productivity in the affected areas and might even cause the death of its victims.

The scholar explained that there are numerous economic and social benefits derived from the damming of rivers. These include irrigation, fishing, sporting, recreation, navigation and hydro-electric power generation. She, however, said damming rivers and streams often gave rise to significant alterations in the natural ecology of the original water bodies. She said it created more conducive environments for the breeding of freshwater snails including intermediate host species and vectors of important human and animal diseases, such as malaria, trypanosomiasis, filariasis, and schistosomiasis, etc.

Professor Oyeyi stated that freshwater habitats all over Kano State were investigated and the studies showed that wide-spread presence of the snail intermediate host of schistosomiasis especially those for the urinary form at water project sites as well as high level of water contact activities at such sites. She observed further that communities located close to these water project sites generally showed a higher prevalence of schistosomiasis than those situated farther away and the state in general has recorded an increase in the disease prevalence.

She said based on the outcome of the studies, there was no doubt that the development and management of water resources in Kano State has contributed to the increased transmission of schistosomiasis in the State. Therefore, she said strategies to mitigate the negative effects should be made integral parts of the planning, implementation and operation of future water projects.

As part of the mitigation measures, the scholar said experts agreed that applying proper combination of sanitary engineering, water control management, snail control, infection surveillance and treatment drugs could avert irrigation effects on schistosomiasis. She added that where prevalence of infection was high, morbidity control primarily by use of population based chemotherapy remained the strategy of choice.

Other mitigation measures include: targeting school children, health education, water supply and sanitation and health risk management.

Earlier, in his address, the Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello, who is the chairman of the occasion explained why there was a little bit of long gestation period between the 17th and 18th inaugural lecture, which he attributed to the reorganization of the Professorial Inaugural Lecture Committee, as well as efforts to elevate presentations and make it at par with international best practices.

He commended Professor Oyeyi, who despite her position as the chairperson of the professorial inaugural lecture, decided to be the first to present her lecture under the new guidelines.

DVC Academics Tasks HODs on Leadership, Excellence

By Mustafa Ibrahim

Heads of department are expected to provide strong academic leadership by managing and developing their departments to achieve the highest level of excellence possible. This was the advice given by the Deputy Vice Chancellor Academic, Prof. Sagir Adamu Abbas, while making a lead presentation at the opening of the 1st Faculty of Clinical Sciences

Department, staff and officers of the Deanery as well as the Provost of the College of Health Sciences, the DVC urged them to imbibe the key attributes expected of a HOD. These include: a strong academic record, engaging constructively with people, good communication skills, flexibility and adaptability to changing circumstances, ability to seek wise counsel, exercising judgment and taking risks, punctuality, IT skills, honesty, upholding quality, working for the success of others, thinking outside the box and having a good listening ear.

In her lead presentation, the Registrar, Hajiya Fatima Binta Mohammed, explained the working of the different units of the Registry Department, especially as they relate to academic activities, such as the Directorate of Establishment Matters (DEM) and Directorate of Examinations, Admissions and Records (DEAR). In response to a question on why MBBS graduates were not given prizes despite their brilliance, she challenged the retreat participants to work out modalities for calculating the CGPA of medical students, so they could compete for prizes. She also urged all the staff to update their personal and next-of-kin details with DEM, so that in the unlikely event of a mishap or death, their family would

In another lead presentation, the representative of the Bursar, Alhaji Abdu Musa Haruna, explained the workings of the various units of the Bursary. He took questions on various financial transactions staff get involved with in the course of their working lives. He especially clarified how and why certain categories of academic and hospital staff were paid certain allowances and the proper procedures for making such claims.

Earlier welcoming the participants, the Dean of the Faculty, Professor Ibrahim Yakasai, said the aim of the retreat, themed Consolidation of Achievements and New Strategies for Enhancing Performance of Heads of Departments and Deanery Officials, was to allow HODs to appreciate their functions and responsibilities, which straddle both the University and the hospital and to synergize and find areas for improvement. It was also to familiarize the leaders with administrative procedures, the collegiate system and discuss ways of moving the Departments, Faculty, College and the university forward.

A 13 point communiqué issued at the end of the retreat called for the practice of mentorship to be pursued and for inaugural lectures to be delivered by Professors in the Faculty. It also urged the University management to augment the inadequate DTLC and assist with additional offices, theatres, seminar and class rooms, laboratories and an e-library.

IIIBF Signs MoU with ICICE & IIASPS for Programme Expansion

By Lamara Garba

The International Institute of Islamic Banking and Finance (IIIBF) of the Bayero University, Kano has signed a two separate Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the International Centre for Islamic Culture and Education (ICICE) and International Islamic Academy School of Preliminary Studies (IIASPS) for the promotion and spreading of Islamic Finance education.

Speaking while receiving the management of the International Centre for Islamic Culture and Education (ICICE) in his office on a courtesy call, shortly before the signing of the MoU, the Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello expressed delight at the collaboration, saying the programme will go a long way in advancing the fortunes of Islamic finance in Nigeria.

According to him, the University is always willing to partner with credible organizations in the efforts towards enhancing and promotion of quality research and teaching, stressing that, he was particularly delighted that ICICE shares so many things in common with the University in the area of Islamic Finance, education, Islamic culture and civilization; entrepreneurship and family values.

“Your visit today is very significant to us here in BUK, because, from what you've said the University has found a worthy collaborator in ICICE. We have so many things in common, our IIIBF programmes are very much relevant to your own projects, so also that of Centre for Islamic Civilisation and Inter Faith Dialogue and the Centre for Gender Studies, I am very sure that we are going to achieve a lot in those areas through this collaboration.” he declared.

Speaking Earlier, the Executive Director of ICICE, Alhaji Aminu Baba Kusa, told the Vice Chancellor that his Centre has been engaging in a number of scholarly activities and has developed programmes on Islamic finance entrepreneurship and marriage counseling.

The centre which is based in Abuja has a number of Schools and is venturing into other programmes aimed at improving the quality of living of the people through the promotion of peaceful coexistence.

Prof. Binta Tijjani Jibril, Director, IIIBF (left), exchanging documents with Exec. Director of ICICE, Alhaji Aminu Baba Kusa

Already he said his centre had a linkage with other international humanitarian organization and development partners, such as Islamic Development Bank, the ISESCO, the Federation of Islamic Universities among many others.

Also speaking at the MoU signing ceremony, which took place at the IIIBF, the Director of the Institute, Professor Binta Tijjani Jibril, said that with the signing of the memorandum, the two organizations would jointly undertake the conduct of the IIIBF's Professional Certificate in Islamic Banking and Finance (PCIBF) in Abuja and other parts of Nigeria.

She explained that the IIIBF being the only University based Institute offering academic and professional training in IBF in West Africa has decided to expand its outreach to other communities with a view to taking Islamic finance education to the door steps of stakeholders.

Professor Binta Tijjani, while expressing readiness of the IIBF to partner with credible organizations at home and abroad for the promotion of Islamic finance pointed out that the management of Bayero University has been very supportive and encouraging to the Institute towards the discharge of its mandate.

Family Arbitration Forum Needed in Society- Prof Maiwada

By Abubakar Yusuf

The former Alqalam University of Katsina Vice Chancellor, Professor Danjuma Abubakar Maiwada, has said that there was the need for every society to form Family Arbitration forum, which would serve as a reconciliation platform to all family members, instead of going to court all the time.

Professor Danjuma Maiwada, who is also a former acting Vice-Chancellor of Bayero University, Kano gave the suggestion when he presented a paper titled, Family Among Muslim in Northern Nigeria: Islamic Injunctions and Contradictory Practices at 2nd Public Lecture organized by Centre for Gender Studies, Bayero University, Kano, on 28th March, 2017.

He said the Family Arbitration Forum was essential for checking abuse in family atmosphere, such as abuse of children, abuse of orphans and rampant divorce cases. “A number of Muslim husbands have been found wanting with respect to divorce. They abuse the Islamic injunctions; for example, some pronounce three divorces in a single pronouncement,” Professor Maiwada added.

He further called on the society, especially Muslims, to remove all contradictory practices relating to the family, such as the demand of huge amounts of wearing materials (lefe) as a condition for wedding.

In her contribution, the Chairperson of the occasion, Professor Juwayriyya Badamasiyu, attributed all the problems of the family to the contradiction of Islamic

“We are venturing out to other communities with the aim of taking Islamic finance to every nook and corner of the country. Alhamdulillah, we share similar values with these new partners which is the vision of advancing the development of Islamic Finance education”, she said.

injunctions by family members. She then called on Muslims to always follow the rules of Islam “if we want be out from these problems”.

While thanking the speaker, the Chairperson of the occasion and all the people who contributed to make the lecture a reality, the Director of the Centre, Professor Aisha Abdul Ismail, said the Centre would continue to focus on issues like the family institution, marriage, divorce, matrimonial relationship, youth, peace-building, religion, values and leadership, among others, to see where the Centre would assist in solving some of the problems in these areas. She said soon the Centre would introduce short courses for youth on family matters.

BUK to Host 4th Conference of Nigerian Geophysical Society

By Bala G. Abdullahi

Arrangements are on top gear by Bayero University, Kano to host the 4th Annual Conference and General Meeting of the Nigerian Geophysical Society (NGS) scheduled for 10th May, 2017. This is the first time that the conference of the society will be held in the northern part of the country and by a public university.

The Nigerian Geophysical Society (NGS) draws its membership from academic staff of the department of Physics, researchers in Atmospheric Physics and Geophysics.

The Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello would be one of the three recipients of the Society's award at its 4th National Conference coming up 10th May, 2017.

The Conference Local Organizing Committee had told the Vice Chancellor, Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello, during a courtesy call on him that they were in his office to inform him that the Society had nominated him as a Fellow of the Nigerian Geophysical Society and award of Leadership, which they said would be presented to Professor Bello during the conference.

They said the three previous conferences of the Society took place all in the Southern part of the country and hosted by privately owned universities, saying that the 4th conference God willing would be held in the north and in a public university- Bayero University, Kano. The committee thanked the Vice Chancellor for accepting to host the conference.

Responding, Professor Bello thanked the Society for choosing BUK as the first public university in the country to host the all-important conference, assuring them that the university would do everything humanly possible to ensure a successful and hitch-free conference.

It could be recalled that the maiden conference of the Society was held at Bells University of Technology, Ota, Ogun State in 2014, the 2nd Conference took place at Covenant University, Ota, Ogun State in 2015 and the 3rd edition was held at Landmark University, Omu-Aran, Kwara State in 2016.

Those to receive award of the Society at the BUK Conference are: Professor Muhammad Yahuza Bello, BUK, Professor F.B. Mukhtar, VC, Federal University, Dutse and Professor Emeratus, I. H. Umar, former VC, BUK.

The Power of Radio Propels Hausa Globally – Prof. Abdalla Uba

By Mustafa Ibrahim

The power of the radio has uniquely enabled Hausa language to spread across a wide spectrum of literacies and geographical barriers, propelling it globally, Professor Uba Abdallah, the Vice Chancellor of National Open University of Nigeria (NOUN) has asserted. He was delivering a public lecture on Thursday, 30th March, 2017, at the Shehu Musa Yar'adua Conference Centre in Abuja, themed The Role of the Media in Promoting Hausa became an enabler for Hausa language to spread across linguistic, political and historic barriers from Kano to Senegal, also gave four spin-offs: that they serve to bind the people to their language and culture, have created a class of “vocal debate warriors” or Sojojin Baka who have compelled elected politicians to better the lives of their constituencies, they contribute to language development via coinage of new words and they enable aspiring writers to share their prose with the public.

The Guest Lecturer, Prof. Abdalla Uba Adamu, VC, NOUN (right) and Prof. Umar Pate, Dean, Faculty of Communication, BUK, who chaired the occasion

The lecture was chaired by Prof. Umar Pate, Dean, Faculty of Communication and, was attended by Dr. Umar Abdullahi Ganduje, Governor of Kano State; Yakubu Dogara, the Speaker, House of Representatives; Mansur Liman, Director-General of FRCN, who also represented the Minister of Information; Malam Garba Shehu, Senior Special Assistant to the President on media; and a team from the Faculty of Communication, BUK, led by Dr. Nura Ibrahim, HOD media Studies. Most spoke glowingly on the excellent contributions of BBC Hausa Service to democratization and public enlightenment across the world, where people speak the language.

Language and Culture. The lecture was the highlight of a series of activities, on air in Abuja and London celebrating 60 years of the Hausa Service of the BBC.

He said the Hausa youth had demonstrated an effective capacity for narrative expressions and are the most literate “illiterate” group of media engagers above their contemporaries in other Nigerian languages groups, by the use of both the old media like radio and new media tools such as Facebook and Whatsapp.

Prof. Abdallah in explaining how radio broadcasts

Prof. Pate and Bala Muhammad of the Faculty of Communication were live guests at the dawn broadcast on the day of the lecture, while Mustafa Ibrahim Chinade was a guest at the afternoon live broadcast from the venue of the lecture, shortly after the ceremony ended.
