

Be Your Students' Role Models

Professor Fathi Urges University Lecturers

By: Abubakar Yusuf & Laurat Faruk Aliyu

A Jordanian Professor, Fathi Hassan Malkawi, has urged his Nigerian counterparts to always be role models for their students.

He gave the advise on Tuesday 17th October, 2017 at Musa Abdullahi Auditorium, when he presented a paper titled Intellectual Development for a Holistic Youth Personality organized by the Centre for Islamic Civilization and Interfaith Dialogue (CICID), in conjunction with the International Institute of Islamic Thought (IIIT), Nigeria.

Professor Malkawi, who is the Jordan Regional Director of IIIT, said University lecturers had a very important role to play in shaping and influencing the personality of the youth, especially at the tertiary level from where they would be moulded into what they aspired to be.

He emphasized that the University had an important role in synthesizing these influences and guiding the youth into developing a holistic personality. This, according to him, would only be achieved through a cordial relationship between University students and their lecturers. Professor Malkawi also called on the University students to seize the opportunity to develop themselves and be useful to the society in general.

Earlier in his introduction of the guest speaker, Dr. Bashir Galadanchi, extolled the virtues of Professor Malkawi's versatility in his career as a professional and retired Professor of Islamic Thought with a bias in epistemology knowledge integration.

Dr. Muhammad Babangida Muhammad, the Deputy

Professor Fathi Hassan Malkawi, delivering his paper

Director of CICID, thanked the speaker for coming all the way from Jordan to deliver the lecture; he also thanked the Bayero University Management for their support and cooperation in making the lecture a successful one.

Management Cautions Staff on Bush Burning

By: Lamara Garba

Following a reported incidence of bush fire within the campuses and the need to avert any calamity in this respect, the management of the University wishes to draw the attention of members of the University Community, particularly those residing within the campuses, on the need to ensure that they make their surrounding environment clean and tidy.

A statement by the Deputy Vice Chancellor (Administration), Professor Adamu Idris Tanko, said the caution had become imperative in view of the harmattan and windy weather which is fast approaching. As that such filthy environments could easily facilitate fire outbreak, irrespective of where the sparking originates.

It advised that all office buildings and its surroundings as well as residential staff quarters be put in a clean shape, suggesting that members should clear their surroundings of grasses to a minimum distance of at least five meters away from their compounds.

The statement warned that the management would not take it kindly for any person found to have a dirty compound or engaging in activities that may endanger life or cause damage to the University property, especially wanton bush burning.
